

Hello, I am trying to contact directly via LinkedIn possible employers in search for a software engineer/programmer, first job.

If you ready to listen and don't want to lose a high quality employee, give me a chance to prove it to you, I am grateful for your time and efforts to help!!

The following tries to explain more about me and what in my opinion hinders my progress in the field...

I would like to start programming in: Java or Python or C++ or C

I have the most knowledge and experience in Java not from choice but because that is the college curriculum, saying that I have a great basis in the others and from experience I find that it is easy to deduce from one another.

Of course I have knowledge in many other subjects (you could check them in my CV/Github/Grades). I will mention only few that will primarily tell my main interests:

- I am taking a specialization course in Coursera called "Parallel,Concurrent and Distributed Programmimg", currently starting the 2 course out of 3.
- I am taking the a Udemy course called "Spring for begginers"
- Courses from my curriculum that I like are: parallel and distributed computing, operating systems, embedded systems, computer organization and assembly language, computer networking, almost all programming courses mainly: C, Python/Prolog, Java, C++

Books I own and love: Deitel&Deitel series(C,Java,C++), Silberschatz's and Tanenbaum's books on OS, Computer networking by Kurose&Keith, Computer organization and design by Hennessy&Patterson and more.

I have many more qualities and I am ready to evolve as needed. My main problem!!! Is that I need to practice acquired knowledge and expose myself daily to this subjects and others.

Please try and believe the following statements regarding me:

- I am worth your time in the long run
- I have great professional as well as social characteristics more than you can imagine at first
- My main objective is to gain experience and hopefully you get all other that this statement entails
